

Doing the Crossing Borders minor in Gili Trawangan, Indonesia, was a once in a lifetime experience. The nature is amazing, the people are friendly, the vibe is all in all relaxed and very calm. In the pictures below is my everyday view of the sunset, which is a 10-minute bike ride. There is also the family that hosted us at their homestay: in the picture they invited us for dinner during Christmas.

The picture on the bottom right was during our hike at mount Rinajni, in Lombok. This took us about 2 days, and we did it together with other volunteers and friends from back home in The Netherlands, that were in the area for the holidays.

The last picture on the bottom left is a picture of what we were doing during our project. This was a place where different shops placed there rubbish in order for the garbage men to pick it up next morning.

All in all it was a great experience which I am very grateful had the chance to experience!
