

As part of the "Crossing Borders" minor, I spent three months doing an internship at the German Embassy in Valletta. Malta is a small island state south of Italy and has been a member of the EU since 2004.

During my internship, I was not only able to gain valuable work experience in an embassy, but also to extremely expand my personal network. As a delegate at various conferences on topics such as sustainability, economic development as well as migration and equality, I learned a lot and made many new contacts.

Besides work, there was also time to discover the exciting and diverse culture of Malta, spend a day at the beach or watch a Maltese football match. The people are super friendly and warm, and I made many new friends.

It made me proud to be able to represent my home country abroad. Overall, the internship and the minor were a unique experience that I enjoyed very much and will not forget
