The master's exam

Is your master final project the last part of your master programme?

	Yes
--	-----

Please note that in accordance with article 7.10, paragraph 2 of the WHW, the master's final examination is deemed successfully completed if the exams of the units of study of the master's degree programme have been taken successfully. As a rule, the date of the successfully completed exam of the last unit of study is taken as the date of the final examination (graduation date).

If so desired (e.g. in case you want to take extra courses before graduating), the student has the right to submit a substantiated request in writing to the examination board to delay the graduation date and consequently the presentation of the certificate. In this request the student must at least indicate the desired duration of the delay. In case the student requests for a delay of the final examination, the new graduation date will be determined by the examination board. The student's request should be submitted simultaneously with this form.
