

A Shared Grief

I remember a time 25 years ago when the world last shared a truly global moment. Now here we are in a global distress. It's 2045 and the climate has reacted to centuries of neglect. I'm surrounded by my family. We don't talk about it much as it's just a part of our daily life. Hazardous air and even food. It's tough and the world grieves.