The Reference letter

A reference letter should come from former or current professors, employers, or supervisors who are familiar with your work and performance. What we hope to learn from the letter can be one or more of the following subjects:

- your academic performance
- extracurricular activities
- achievements
- participation special projects
- future potential
- personal qualities
- professional / academic qualities
- past accomplishments
- specific skills (leadership, languages etc.)
- what makes you stand out.

The letter will help us to get an idea of the individual behind GPAs and standardized test scores.

Remember that the letter should come on official letterhead paper, needs to be signed and has to include complete contact information.
