The new left-side menu is now more compact and more configurable. The new compact form is more readable and occupies less space - making it easier to quickly navigate between content types and underlying filters. Lists of system generated and custom filters for each content type are now fully configurable, with renaming and reordering options for custom filters and reordering for system generated filter.

Multiple groups can be open

You now have full control over which navigation groups are open or closed. Clicking a group no longer triggers a page load and redirects you to the first item. Instead, it simply expands the group, allowing you to browse the contents before choosing where to go.
