

TAKING EXAMS ON CAMPUS IN CORONA TIMES

PREPARE BEFORE COMING TO CAMPUS

- Make sure you know in which building and room you need to be
- Look into the regulations that apply during the exams

BEFORE VISITING OUR CAMPUS, TAKE THE HEALTH CHECK

- Take the health check
- Do not come to campus in case of COVID-19 (cold) symptoms and find an alternative solution

THINK ABOUT HOW THE EXAM SHOULD TAKE PLACE

- Make sure you are well in time and discuss the final details with the examination supervisors
- Are you in need of an extra supervisor? Contact the examination office on time
- The layout of the rooms is set to comply with the 1.5-metre distance ruling.
- Make sure you make optimal use of the scheduled rooms and spread students. Also, it is good to inform them about this.
- If a room offers more space than needed, feel free to keep greater distances

DURING THE EXAM

- Do not make any changes to the layout or move furniture
- Keep a positive vibe in the room and make sure everyone adheres to the rules
- If you see anyone not following the rules, you may point it out kindly.

AFTER THE EXAM

- Supervisors will help to ensure that all students will leave the room as desired
- Make sure that students will not stick around after the test and will head home.

THIS IS HOW UT ARRANGES ON-CAMPUS EXAMS DURING CORONA TIMES

- UT has set maximum group sizes to 100 where and when possible. There is no official national guideline to the number of attendees.
- If group sizes are over 70, UT will have extra supervisors available to help following the rules.
- All buildings, lecture halls and other exam locations comply with the official ventilation and air circulation guidelines from RIVM (The Dutch National Institute for Public Health and the Environment).
- Walking routes have been set out in each building, taking into account the 1.5-metre guideline, and are similar at all locations.
- The UT will enlist the help of stewards in places where routing is complicated, to ensure safe movement.
